Release Reform

Editor:

There may be a tradeoff between the shredding of the constitutional rights of inmates at the county jail and the constitutional rights of law-abiding citizens to be protected from potential predatory criminals ("You Can Now Stay In Jail Until Dawn," May 8). Prisoners released in the middle of the night may commit grand theft auto as their only means of transportation to wherever they wish to travel. So, while ostensibly protecting the constitutional rights of Gary Bullock by releasing him from jail, the constitutional right-to-life of Father Eric Freed was violated with impunity. We have a new policy where decisions to be released or not are to be set by jail inmates themselves. How about that?

It may also be argued that the middle-of-the-night release of Bullock violated Bullock's constitutional right to be protected on the grounds that he posed a danger both to himself and to others. It might well have been the case that jail officials sought to teach Bullock a lesson by kicking him out of a warm jail into freezing outside temperatures. But it was the jail officials on the scene, not Bullock, who needed to find a lesson here. How many more midnight murders must be committed before common sense prevails on jail release policy?

Perhaps the county grand jury should conduct an independent investigation of this whole sorry episode in order to hold those officials to account for the terrible mistakes in judgment inherent in Bullock's release. There is ample statutory and case law that provides for holding jail inmates for up to 48 hours in exigent circumstances. Section 825 of the California Penal Code and Riverside County Superior Court vs McLaughlin is the case in point.

Vote for this Supervisor...

Editor:

The first time I attended a Eureka City Council meeting and chose to make a three-minute public statement, I was very pleasantly surprised. Wow! This Northern California town we had moved to had an amazing mayor. She was polite, respectful, professional and extremely courteous, treating everyone exactly the same. She was very patient with presenters with communication challenges. This dynamite mayor's name was Virginia Bass.

Virginia Bass served our community six years on the Eureka City Council and four years as Eureka City Mayor. Next she went on to win a successful campaign as 4th District Supervisor.

And, yes, she is blessed with a supportive husband. Our world needs more of those.

Virginia Bass always returns phone calls. She is not too busy to take care of her constituents and her many responsibilities. She has a proven reputation for honesty, trustworthiness, punctuality and is a dedicated supervisor.

Please vote for Virginia Bass for 4th District Supervisor.

Minnie Wolf, Eureka

Editor:

"There's a big difference between running for office and actually governing," wrote Judy Hodgson two years ago in reference to Supervisor Virginia Bass.

One of many "giving kudos to Bass for chairing an emotional discussion, keeping everyone civil, and for finding a solution — a way forward," she concluded: "That's leadership."

Like her father O. H. Bass, hard work and a dedication to community-minded service seems almost inbred. O. H.'s restaurant and lounge seated 200 with a regular staff of 25, and seated 250 more in its banquet room. She became a waitress at 15, and all through high school and graduation from HSU with honors in business administration in 1986, the year her father died.

She managed O. H.'s for the next 31 years, was elected twice as councilmember, as mayor and to the county supervisor seat her father once held.

That's hard work and dedication. That's leadership.

Leo Sears, Eureka

Editor:

We need jobs in Humboldt County! Has Chris Kerrigan ever created a job? Virginia Bass has. Has Chris ever had a real job? Virginia has since she was 15. What has Chris been doing since he left the Eureka City Council? The public deserves to know!

When Chris was on the council he left for months to work in the presidential campaign of John Edwards. He abandoned his constituents in Humboldt County. Having a phone hookup during the council sessions did not make up for the lack of attention he was able to pay to the needs of the citizens he was elected to represent. If he were elected to the position of supervisor, and the opportunity came again to work on the campaign of another presidential hopeful, would he again abandon his responsibilities? I hope we never have to find out. Let's re-elect Virginia Bass as 4th District supervisor.

North Coast Young Democrats chairman Hezekiah Allen was in 2013 a member of the Humboldt Coalition for Property Rights advisory council. Recently he and the Young Democrats endorsed Chris Kerrigan for 4th District county supervisor. Chris Kerrigan himself, endorsed by a member of HumCPR, the developers' group "ruining" the General Plan Update?

We know Allen's environmental restoration career, assembly run, his engaging personality — and his HumCPR connection. Me, I'll support Virginia Bass. She is endorsed by Betty Chinn, and recently voted (against HumCPR — see Sally McDonald's My Word, Times-Standard May 11) for affordable housing close to town in the Housing Element. She supports Eureka neighborhood groups, and local business development on the Samoa peninsula. Please vote for Virginia Bass.

community involvement are laudable. She is an asset to our community. Everything about her is good except her politics. Her campaign ads and her roster of supporters signal to me that she will keep Humboldt County stuck in the past. I want Humboldt County to move forward. Four more years of status quo leadership is unacceptable.

Chris Kerrigan's progressive vision is exactly what the 4th District needs right now. He will pursue smart land use policies that will protect the public good and promote quality of life. I am heartened to know that he will stand up to special interest groups like HumCPR. He understands my concern about public safety. He will seek more funding for the district attorney's office and more coverage by the sheriff's office. I am voting for Chris Kerrigan and for Humboldt County's future.

Peter DeAndreis, Eureka

Editor:

Voters for 5th District Supervisor may be wondering what advantages a newcomer like Sharon Latour might bring to county political leadership, especially compared to incumbent Ryan Sundberg.

Ms Latour has lived in far more sophisticated and developed places. She knows how comparatively pristine Humboldt is, how vulnerable we are to outside predators looking to exploit our under-valued resources, and she has no ties to special financial or family interests.

That is, Latour brings an independent perspective to what has traditionally been an insider's game. Ryan Sundberg is endorsed by many of these inside gamers, whose vested interests often prevail because of their long-standing ties to policymakers.

Having watched Maxxam ride roughshod over our county, I am sensitive to the downside of the personal associations that can shape our future. Tough decisions are tougher when your friends' wallets are at stake, especially when dealing with world-class corporate interests and financiers.

Ken Miller, McKinleyville

Editor:

I have been watching Sharon Latour grow with incredible speed into an exceptional candidate for 5th District supervisor. She entered the campaign late for major endorsements and late to raise a comfortable funding base. However, Sharon is making up for these disadvantages with her discipline, motivation, and compassion. In just two months, she has studied and absorbed volumes of information about the county and District 5, met with hundreds of people, traveled throughout the area and attended scores of meetings. I am impressed by the extraordinary gains Sharon has made.

Through her life experiences, having lived and worked in many areas of the U.S. and in Europe, from careers with women's athletics to the U.S. Air Force, Sharon has a wealth of knowledge and skill in leadership ability and financial responsibility. I applaud Sharon for her integrity and courage in running for 5th District supervisor.

Linda Doerflinger, McKinleyville

Editor:

I met Sharon Latour at a neighborhood gathering. It was refreshing to be listened to, and it was obvious that she had thought deeply about our issues. Her background is unique in its range and diversity. Her leadership role in sports, the military, education and religion reflects her ability to bring together many different voices to build involvement and develop communities.

Having grown up in the military, I understand its culture of discipline, integrity, and service. It is not just a matter of rhetoric. In the Air Force she managed people, money, programs and complex cross-cultural communication. Although she did not grow up here, she is committed to making it a place for all citizens. Furthermore, she looks beyond a five-year plan to a generational plan for economic and social development that protects the health of our land and community.

We need Sharon Latour for 5th District Supervisor.

Maureen Kearns, McKinleyville

And For This DA...

Editor:

What management principles apply to being DA?

Know and commit to the mission. Corporate managers maximize wealth. The DA serves the people. The justice system is about process and people, not profit. Maggie Fleming understands this. She respects the competing rights of victims, defendants and the public. For 20 years Maggie has proven her commitment and compassion in our diverse and fractious county.

REASONS A TOILET ON THE PLAZA MIGHT NOT WORK

Know the product. The DA must master complex laws and conflicting concepts. Years of experience in a range of cases and courts have given Maggie the expertise required.

Maximize resources. Management is taught in school but actually learned by rising through the ranks. Maggie excels when time is limited, resources scarce, problem-solving essential. Her teamwork and mentoring successes demonstrate her ability to attract and keep the good people we need.

Maggie's skills, leadership, and dedicated service show that she is our best choice for district attorney.

Denise Isaac, Arcata

Editor:

Experience counts when choosing a candidate for district attorney, but what kind of experience? I worked for over 30 years in watershed research, which like the practice of law, has a long and steep learning curve. I was supervised under a variety of administrators. I flourished under those who had been a scientist like myself for decades, thus had the professional experience to mentor me effectively. Others had more administrative experience but knew less than I about the substance, functioning, and culture of watershed research and management. At best, their benign neglect allowed me to sink or swim so long as I followed the rules.

I drew lessons from this in my choice of Maggie Fleming for our next district attorney. In over 25 years of practicing prosecutorial law, mostly in Humboldt County, she has demonstrated the capability, integrity and breadth of experience to be an exceptional DA.

Tom Lisle, McKinleyville

Editor:

I began my career as a deputy district attorney in another county and came to Humboldt County in 1984 serving as chief assistant district attorney in the 1980s and '90s. Since leaving public service, I have practiced law as a partner in one of Humboldt County's oldest firms.

My message is simple and positive. I support Maggie Fleming to be our next district attorney because she is quite clearly the best qualified candidate. In terms of experience, judgment, ethics and integrity, I know from my experience Maggie Fleming is an exceptional choice.

Truth and competence matter. While I don't always agree with Maggie, I do know that she listens, cares deeply about others, and is vested in doing justice. I have great confidence in her judgment and sense of fairness to do so.

Please join me in supporting Maggie Fleming to be our next district attorney.

Michael K. Robinson, Eureka

Editor:

I'm supporting Maggie Fleming for District Attorney. As a 33-year law enforcement/corrections professional and a councilmember for the city of Eureka, I'm concerned about the safety of our citizens and the negative impact that crime, drug addiction and homelessness have on our community.

In these times of slow economic recovery coupled with the effects of prison realignment and jail overcrowding, we need a district attorney with experience to prosecute and incarcerate the offenders who pose the most risk to public safety while also recognizing the value in prevention, substance abuse treatment and mentally ill offender programs.

Like us, Maggie is concerned about late night jail releases and is supportive of legislative changes that will address this problem. As our district attorney, Maggie will be proactive, collaborative, and she has what it takes to find creative yet sound solutions. Vote for experience; vote Maggie Fleming for district attorney.

Melinda Ciarabellini, Eureka

Editor:

We are writing in support of Elan Firpo for District Attorney. Paul Gallegos is not running for re-election. During his tenure, Paul has exhibited great personal integrity, compassion and fairness for all defendants, a strong commitment to civil liberties, and a determination to not be influenced by special interest groups. In addition, Paul does not allow his personal values and world view to effect his decision-making as the chief law enforcement officer of the county.

In reviewing the qualifications of the four candidates, Elan shares many of Paul's fine qualities and is the most qualified. She also brings extensive experience from the private sector. A call to service led her to law school with the specific goal of becoming a prosecutor in the county where she lives and is raising her children.

We urge you to vote for Elan.

Ron Sinoway and Molly Hickey-Sinoway, Salmon Creek

Editor:

What I would like to talk about (I'm Elan Firpo's mom) are the cute nicknames, the charming things she said and did as a child.

What I should tell you is how she surpassed everything this mom ever imagined for her to be — I am a perfect example of "be careful what you wish for" because she stepped out of my arms (walked age 9 months), out of my house (graduated at 15 and into her own place at 16), became an excellent materials engineer, then Elan became an attorney, passing the bar the first time!

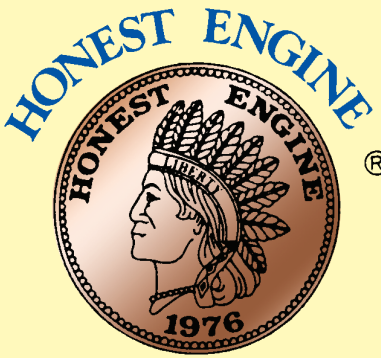

You should elect Elan Firpo as district Attorney because her experience, accomplishments in her life and quality that she has demonstrated make her the ideal candidate. Elect Elan, and the Humboldt County District Attorney's office will improve and become a shining example of doing things the right way, for all the people.

The Escalation of 'Wild Bill'

Documents raise questions about an officer's shooting

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

It was about 2:45 p.m. on May 6, when a Humboldt County Sheriff's deputy and a sergeant arrived at a residence on Shelter Cove's Kelly Road, where 55-year-old William Lloyd Nelson was living. Several weeks earlier, Nelson's girlfriend of 15 years, and the mother of his son, filed a request for a domestic violence restraining order from the Humboldt County Superior Court, alleging that Nelson had threatened her life, coming to her door with a loaded Glock pistol in one hand and an ax in the other. She alleged that Nelson knocked holes in her walls with the ax and "waved the gun around" while threatening her. The court set the matter for a hearing and granted the temporary restraining order, as well as an accompanying "move-out" order that required Nelson to immediately vacate the residence, which was owned by his girlfriend and her father.

Court records indicate deputies initially attempted to serve Nelson with the order on April 27 but were unable to find him. They returned on May 6 and, according to Sheriff Mike Downey, spoke with Nelson. Downey declined to discuss the exchange in detail, but said the situation escalated and culminated with Nelson opening fire on the officers with a handgun, shooting one in the chest before retreating into the home. Downey said the officers returned fire as they attempted to flee to safety. A bullet-proof vest likely saved the injured deputy's life, Downey said, adding that he was shot at "close proximity."

Nelson was arrested early the next morning.

Downey said he's not sure exactly what the sergeant and deputy sent to serve the restraining order knew about Nelson, his past or even the allegations the led to the temporary order. But Downey conceded that Nelson has a bit of a reputation in the Southern Humboldt area, saying he remembered Nelson from his time as a resident deputy down there and that "at that time, he had displayed some issues that would raise your awareness."

Probation reports from Nelson's prior convictions, unsealed after he was charged May 9 with the attempted murder of a police officer, show a string of contacts between Nelson and local law enforcement dating back to 2006. They paint a picture of a man with a propensity for stock piling weapons and disregarding the terms of his probation, and they raise a host of questions.

According to his probation reports, Nelson was born Oct. 20, 1958 to Bill Nelson and Helen Adelle Radar, and learned as an adult that "he was actually the product of his father's extramarital affair with his secretary, and his parents adopted him." Nelson's parents split when he was 8 or 9, and his father was murdered about four years later. Within about a year of his father's death, according to the report, Nelson was sent by his junior high school to participate in a wilderness program run by psychiatrists. He participated in the program for a couple of years and then moved out on his own. At 18, he hitchhiked north to Washington, where he "entered the Gospel Outreach Christian Commune," according to the report, and stayed there for a couple of years. He's spent much of the rest of his life bouncing between the Southern Humboldt area and Oregon, working as a house painter and a tree planter, and growing and selling marijuana to make "$1,500 here and there."

In August of 2006, Nelson was pulled over for speeding on U.S. Highway 101 and found to be drunk. He became combative, according to the report, and pushed an officer before being handcuffed and placed in a patrol car, at which point he "proceeded to smash the window of the vehicle." A search of Nelson's car found a pair of semi-automatic pistols, a shotgun, a number of loaded magazines and night vision binoculars. Charged with drunk driving, felony vandalism and resisting arrest, Nelson ultimately pleaded guilty to a single count of misdemeanor drunk driving, commonly known as a "wet and reckless," and was placed on three year's summary probation.

In June of the following year, prosecutors filed a complaint alleging Nelson assaulted a man with a firearm. According to the Sheriff's Office report from the incident, Nelson was driving down Shelter Cove Road when he came across Lukas Mullins, who had been in a car accident. Mullins reportedly attempted to flag Nelson down as he approached, but fled when he saw it was Nelson driving the car, telling deputies that Nelson had a reputation for being "crazy." Nelson allegedly fired three gunshots at Mullins as he ran away, hitting him once in the bottom of his foot. Nelson told officers he'd only fired his gun once into the ground, and only after Mullins tried to stab him in the neck. The case went to trial but the jury hung, after which Nelson pleaded no contest to a single count of negligently discharging a firearm. He was sentenced to time served and three year's summary probation.

In July of the following year, prosecutors filed a complaint alleging Nelson had used an assault rifle to shoot up a cell phone tower neighboring his Shelter Cove home. According to the probation officer's report, Nelson was allegedly upset that the new tower was obstructing his view and shot it up — stray bullets hitting a State Parks Building, a portable toilet and some equipment on site — causing more than $100,000 in damage. The report turned up some other troubling details, as well.

“Some Shelter Cove residents referred to him as ‘Wild Bill’ and it was known when the defendant became angry with people he would show up at their residences and shoot ‘stuff,’” the report states. A couple of residents told the officer, according to the report, that they’d recently gotten into an argument with Nelson about their having put up a telephone pole bordering his property. After the argument, they reported that they came home one day to find someone had broken into their home, “smeared decomposing fish on the wall; shot their cat with a .22 caliber bullet; and flooded the inside of the house with an outdoor hose.”

When officers served a search warrant on Nelson’s home in the cell tower vandalism case, they reported finding two loaded pistols, multiple magazines, a high-powered rifle and a host of ammunition, all of which violated court orders and terms of Nelson’s probation in prior cases. While searching the residence, officers also reported speaking with Nelson’s girlfriend, who reported that she was afraid of him. When police picked up Nelson a short time later they found he had a key to a storage facility. When they searched it later that day they reported finding a pair of assault rifles, numerous high-capacity magazines, a host of assault rifle parts and “thousands of rounds of rifle, pistol and shotgun ammunition.”

Nelson ultimately pleaded guilty in March 2010 to felony vandalism, discharging a firearm at an unoccupied vehicle, negligent discharge of a firearm and being a felon in possession of a firearm under a deal stipulating he get a suspended sentence of three years, eight months in state prison and a grant of probation, meaning he would stay out of prison if he complied with probation and followed the law. If he reoffended or violated probation, he could be sent to prison for the full sentence.

The probation officer notes Nelson had an “arsenal of disconcerting proportion” and noted his concern that during interviews Nelson was dismissive of his “unfavorable reputation,” his history of convictions and concerns about the extent of his arsenal. Considering the nature of the offense and Nelson’s “anti-authority” views, he was not “the most desirable candidate for community supervision,” the officer concludes.

With a three-year, eight-month prison sentence hanging over his head, Nelson had some incentive to stay out of trouble but, nonetheless, quickly wound up back on law enforcement’s radar. Just seven months after entering into the plea deal, the Sheriff’s Office served a search warrant on a large marijuana grow operation in the Dutyville area and found Nelson fleeing. Nelson’s ID card was located at the scene, along with a pair of Glock handguns, a police scanner and more than 200 pounds of marijuana. Despite initially facing charges of possession of marijuana for sale, being a felon in possession of a firearm and maintaining a place for the purpose of manufacturing a controlled substance, Nelson pleaded guilty Nov. 18, 2010 to felony marijuana cultivation. His eight-month prison sentence was suspended, and he was again sentenced to three years’ probation on March 15, 2011.

It’s unclear to what extent the Humboldt County Probation Department has been monitoring Nelson, or if it was informed of the allegations his long-time girlfriend made in her request for a temporary restraining order. However, the girlfriend notes in her application that she filed a report with the Sheriff’s Office about Nelson in 2013, and talked to the district attorney’s office in 2012 and 2013, including to report that Nelson stole a handgun from her safe.

The serving of eviction notices and vacate orders can become emotionally charged, Downey said, adding that his office has changed policy — as have most agencies throughout the state — to require that two officers be present, “for the safety of the officers and the individual.” Downey said he believes his department and officers did everything right in this case, but said the incident is still under review to see if “we need to build in some additional safeguards.” ●

Considering the nature of the offense and Nelson’s “anti-authority” views, he was not “the most desirable candidate for community supervision,” the officer concludes.

Our hearty rhododendrons lack the delicate grace of Portland's famed roses; Eureka's bridges are fewer in number — and much less spectacular — than the spans that etch the skies of the Rose City. Portland's Mount Hood offers killer skiing an hour away from downtown; our nearest source of powder is Mount Shasta, a four-hour drive east.

The second-fiddle humiliation Eureka suffers at the hands of its northerly neighbor doesn't end there. Lauded far and wide as a hipster paradise, Portland is fairly castigated for vacuuming-up the North Coast's talented youth. Each year around this time, we bear witness to the northward migration of our beloved Bradens, Dakotas and Rowans — their ironic trucker caps, vinyl records and social media startups in tow — as they pack up the Kia Sportage and key "PDX" into their GPS apps.

But take heart, Eureka: We've got the edge where it really counts. It turns out that Portland's cheeky bragging rights as "the place where young people go to retire" — coined by IFC's cooler-than-thou Portlandia TV series — in fact belongs to us.

The latest labor statistics reveal that Eureka's unemployment rate is, at 12 percent, almost double that of Portland's. Our hollowed-out Bayshore Mall ably attests to the fact that entry-level jobs in the Fog Belt aren't going begging for young labor; the jobs simply don't exist. Millennials who are truly charmed by Portlandia's early retirement should save a tank of gas, stay put and never have to work in the first place.

Eureka: Where young people really go to retire.

So Portland, if you're reading this: #SuckIt.

Psst — Hey Kid: Which Way to the Library?

Of course, government job statistics speak only to the "official" workforce.

But if it is the charter of our institutions of secondary education to prepare youngsters for the rigors of Humboldt's actual economy, the library at McKinleyville High School is doing a standout job.

The staid high school library — once the sleepy domain of Rand McNally, Encyclopedia Britannica and Pueblo, Colorado-derived pamphleteering — is a full-blown Loompanics Unlimited reading room, on the Panther campus anyway.

The Mack Town High library catalog offers its aspiring entrepreneurs dozens of titles pertinent to the North Coast's bustling narcotic industries. One such tome — conveniently titled Meth — devotes an entire chapter to "how it is made" that reads like a script from Breaking Bad.

Then there's Mack's Medical Marijuana, which offers NoHum teens a helpful primer on the many legitimacies of 215 horticulture. (Youngsters will be well-served come arraignment time.)

In all, Mack High provides student access to dozens of books explaining the ins-and-outs of drug culture. The shelf space devoted to our once-relevant logging industry of days gone by is, meanwhile, meager by comparison. Tellingly, among Pantherdom's scant offerings to the annals of tree-felling are two copies of Julia Butterfly Hill's Luna: The Story of a Tree. But you won't find much in the way of actual chainsaws or lumber mills.

Goes to show, you can't stop progress.

Stamp-Out Hunger... Or, How To Dump Those Expired 'Survivalist' Rations

Want to get rid of that can of condensed milk that expired back during the Bush Administration? You may have missed your chance.

Stamp Out Hunger is the annual food drive sponsored by your local postal carrier. You likely received one of their blue, plastic donation bags in your mail box — ready for off-loading all the canned pork-and-beans you hoarded in the run-up to Y2K.

Launched under the obsolete, Depression-era notion that poor people aren't eating enough, donated foodstuffs are delivered, or so we're led to believe, to the 'hungry' poor. Given the direct correlation between poverty and obesity, however, a cynic would perhaps more adroitly view Stamp Out Hunger as an artifice of the federal government to cull the herd of impoverished fatsos by over-feeding them right into heart disease. After all, when's the last time you actually saw a skinny person queued up in front of the McDonald's Dollar Value Menu?

The My 600 Pound Life contestants you see buying carts full of WinCo soda and pizza illustrate the fact that even more food is the last thing poor folk are actually in need of. By offloading cases of sodium- and fat-laden canned goods to the already corpulent masses in last week's Stamp-Out, you could have fulfilled your patriotic duty of ensuring that only the fittest Americans survive while thinning butterballs out of the gene pool.

However you choose to interpret it, your blue-bagged stockpile of Dinty Moore mystery-meat was likely happily spirited off your front porch last Saturday, courtesy of your friendly postal carrier.

Berg vs. WalMart: A Pyrrhic Victory?

We're 15 years removed from the epic defeat of Measure J, in which Eureka's progressive wing — marshaled by future Assemblywoman Patty Berg — electorally crushed the proposed development of a WalMart on Old Town's forlorn Balloon Track property.

Was the perceived triumph over Big Box retail by locally owned, independent businesses merely an ephemeral respite on the road to mega-corp hegemony?

Sadly, it was: Explosive new statistics reveal nothing less than a corporate blitzkrieg on Eureka's once-dominant, locally owned retail sector.

To be sure, during the 1999 campaign Berg and her cohorts were accused by free market-types of petty NIMBY-ism. An Arkansas-fueled offensive — notoriously backed by Eureka's then-mayor Nancy Flemming — branded Berg and her cadre of Measure J detractors as mercenaries bent on thwarting the healthy level of competition that Big Blue ostensibly would offer.

Pitted against the deepest pockets in all the land, Berg slew the retail goliath with a plain-spoken truism: That the introduction to Humboldt's fragile economy of mega-corp behemoths would usher in the death of local mom-and-pops. Nonsense, retorted the gung-ho capitalists: More competition meant more consumer selection and thus a healthier marketplace.

It hasn't exactly worked out that way, and if any erstwhile Measure J supporters are interested, Patty Berg is now serving-up crow pie.

The defeat of Measure J, as it turns out, was less Waterloo than Wounded Knee: In 2003, Target would, to muted controversy, open its doors on the revamped footprint of Eureka's Montgomery Ward. WalMart itself would be soon to follow, operating under the same stealth strategy by taking over Gottschalk's vacated premises.

Now, according to a scathing report just released by the federal Bureau of Economic Analysis, Eureka's once locally based economy has indeed been gutted by a swarm of multinationals.

In 2003, when Target opened, four of Eureka's top five private employers, by number of employees, produced and or sold local products. They were, in order from greatest number of employees: (1) Schmidbauer Lumber; (2) Times-Standard; (3) Pierson Building Center; (4) Pacific Choice Seafoods; and (5) WinCo Foods.

Of those five, today Schmidbauer remains as the lone locally-owned holdout, although it's dropped to number two in the rankings. The other four — all stock-owned and beholden to distant investors — read like an all-star team of zombie Big Boxes: WalMart, Target, Kohl's and Costco.

The people who own local enterprise — the George Schmidbauers and Bill Piersons — have a stake in the community because just like us they drive our roads, breathe our air and send their children to our schools. It's a shame that they now earn fewer of our dollars than hedge-fund-owned WalMart.

The zombification of Humboldt's retail hub is now "mission accomplished."

Happy shopping, Nancy. ●

Mistrial in Molest Case

A McKinleyville man was sitting in the proverbial executioner's chair last week when the power went out.

Timothy Floyd Littlefield was facing eight life sentences in state prison without the possibility of parole stemming from convictions on 11 child molestation charges when he stood before Humboldt County Superior Court Judge John Feeney May 8. Instead Feeney declared a mistrial in the case, finding juror misconduct occurred in the months-long trial that wrapped in September.

"In all my years as a lawyer, I have never seen anything like this," Littlefield's attorney, Russell Clanton, said. "It was a great day for justice."

It's the second time Littlefield's case had ended in a mistrial, after jurors deadlocked at 11-1 in favor of convicting him on all counts in 2012. Following the most recent trial, jurors deliberated for just three hours, returning guilty verdicts on all charges.

Police arrested Littlefield in February 2009 on allegations of repeatedly molesting an 8-year-old family member. Prosecutors argued during both trials that Littlefield kept the girl in isolation and threatened her to keep quiet as he molested her in secret for more than a year. Clanton argued at the trials that the victim, her mother and another witness concocted the allegations to get back at Littlefield for abusing his wife.

Clanton said he and a defense investigator have been feverishly working the case in recent months looking to get Littlefield — who he maintains is innocent — a chance at another trial. Talking with Clanton's investigator, one juror said he simply felt the defense didn't prove Littlefield was not guilty during the trial. "I almost fell out of my chair," Clanton said. Knowing the criminal justice system places the burden of proof on the prosecution in all cases, and that he, Feeney and the prosecutor, District Attorney Paul Gallegos, had all gone to lengths to explain that to the jurors, Clanton said he then had the juror sign a sworn declaration saying he felt the defense didn't prove its case.

That declaration was ultimately enough for Feeney to declare a mistrial, saying he couldn't send a man to prison for life with this potential juror misconduct hanging over the case, according to Clanton.

Gallegos said he will, "of course," be retrying the case and Feeney set a new trial date for June 30. The alleged victim in the case is now a teenager, and Gallegos said he feels terrible that she will be put through another trial and asked to testify again. She's been dealing with Littlefield's criminal case now, Gallegos said, for five years.

GOVERNMENT

Council Meeting Prayers OK with SCOTUS

Despite a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding an upstate New York town's right to open its public meetings with a prayer, a local attorney is moving forward with his case alleging the Eureka City Council violated the law when doing the same.

Eureka attorney Peter Martin brought the suit last year on behalf of resident Carole Beaton, alleging that the city violated the California Constitution by repeatedly opening meetings with nondenominational prayers and by allowing Mayor Frank Jager to use his title and office to promote a "mayor's prayer breakfast" on city property. Martin said he doesn't foresee any impact from the U.S. Supreme Court's recent 5-4 decision.

"(Beaton's) suit is based on the California constitutional provisions separating church and state, which are somewhat different than the federal provisions," Martin said. "I don't think this carries a lot of weight for our case."

Excessive Energy in Arcata

The results of the city's "indoor grow tax" so far

It's been seven months since Arcata's excessive electricity tax went into effect, and the threat to residential growers' bottom lines seems to have sent most of them packing.

The results are drastic. In the year or so between city residents' approval of the tax and implementation, the number of houses using "excessive" energy dropped from 633 to just 82 in March. With that result, and municipal fears that growers will simply set up shop in McKinleyville, Eureka or other unincorporated parts of the county, other local governments are considering similar taxes.

The city conceived of the tax ostensibly to reduce greenhouse emissions and bring it into compliance with state energy policy — but they also designed it to deter large residential marijuana grows. Since passage, households that exceed 600 percent of a Pacific Gas and Electric Company baseline must pay an additional 45 percent for every kilowatt hour they use. That baseline is roughly equivalent to three times the usage of a normal residence, according to the city. A 4-by-4-foot indoor grow triples a home's energy usage, according to a study by Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory researcher Evan Mills. "The added electricity use is equivalent to running about 90 refrigerators."

It appears Arcata's indoor growers got the city's message. "After the first month's figures I was ready to declare victory," Arcata Vice Mayor Michael Winkler said.

Police Chief Tom Chapman more or less agreed. "To the main point, it seems like the high-use tax has been effective," he said. "Has it eliminated [residential marijuana growing]? No. But the egregious, in-your-face, full-conversion grows? Those have seemed to be resolved to some degree. And that has really been the concern for us."

It's still early to declare any trends about grow houses, said Deputy Director of Environmental Services Karen Diemer. "We'd love to have 12 months of data," she said. There are reasons other than "green flight" that might have reduced the number of houses exceeding the threshold.

For one, PG&E, under mounting statewide pressure, announced it would no longer offer the low-income CARE program to households exceeding the same electricity threshold. (That program was subsidized by non-CARE rate-payers.) As part of that switch, PG&E offered assistance to households to bring usage under the "excessive" range.

And growers may have taken it upon themselves to save energy under the threat of a spiking electricity bill.

But Chapman said residential grow houses do appear to be disappearing in correlation with the tax. "The complaints we've received have reduced proportionally to those numbers," he said. "They seem to jive."

Is it just a matter of growers fleeing to more tax-friendly environs?

Chapman said that household grows don't seem to be popping up elsewhere nearby based on anecdotal reports — though he hasn't met with other law enforcement agencies to specifically discuss the tax's effects. He said legalization in Washington and particularly Colorado should be considered when we talk about what's happening to indoor growers. It could be that people are relocating to less expensive and less legally treacherous climates.

Winkler said PG&E reports haven't shown much of an increase in excessive energy households outside of Arcata since the tax was implemented, noting that 8 to 10 percent of households in unincorporated areas are classified as excessive, which is similar to Arcata's pre-tax numbers. Winkler said about 4 percent of Eureka's households exceed the electricity threshold. Eureka and the county are mulling similar taxes.

But the tax also came with an eyebrow-raising $600,000 price tag. Projections based on 2011 statistics saw Arcata making more than $1 million a year from tax revenue, but what happens now that just 13 percent of the exceeding households are paying that tax?

Well, Arcata seems to be doing fine. The city has generated more than $225,000 since November. And even if that income dries up, some council members noted when presenting the tax to voters that the goal was reduction in energy use and residential grows — not a new source of income. Arcata residents, by a two-to-one margin, agreed. ●

It might still officially be spring, but the summer fest season has arrived and it's time to slather on the sunscreen and get ready for dancing in the streets. We offer you a look at the best music festivals, local and in greater Northern California, starting with one coming up this weekend.

The Fourth Humboldt Arts Festival. A celebration of local music and the arts on graduation weekend in downtown Arcata. After taking some time off, the festival is back in a new home, the Arcata Creamery District. Visual arts, dancing and music will fill the Arcata Playhouse, Redwood Raks and the surrounding streets with 40-plus local bands and dance troupes. (See this week's calendar for details). Hard to believe, but it's all free. May 17 and 18, the Arcata Creamery District, Eighth and L streets. www.humboldtartsproject.com

The 38th Annual Summer Arts and Music Festival. The Mateel people offer what they describe as "the most comprehensive celebration of art and music on the North Coast" spread over two days. The headliners: Pimps of Joytime, The Brothers Comatose, Nahko and Medicine for the People, Afrolicious, our own Motherlode with special guests DJ Logic and Bill Summers, and psychedelic folk queen Joanne Rand. Local bands and dance troupes keep the action constant. Saturday, May 31 and Sunday, June 1, Benbow Lake Recreation Area south of Garberville on US 101. www.mateel.org

The Kiwanis 37th Annual Redwood Run. The party for bikers and their friends includes motorcycle games, a mechanical bull, a wet T-shirt contest and "unofficial titty alley" (editor's note: slow eye roll) as well as rock, blues and country, like Marshall Tucker Band, Puddle of Mudd, Moonshine Bandits and, as always, biker faves The Fried Brothers. Friday, June 13 to Sunday, June 15, Riverview Ranch, Piercy. www.kiwanisrwr.com.

The 24th Annual Arcata Bay Oyster

Festival. Bivalves are front and center, but the all-local music lineup touches all the bases including Bayou Swamis, Striped Pig Stringband, the Jim Lahman Band, Motherlode (working the fest circuit this summer) and Best Kept Secret with the ad hoc All Star Rockoystra, whose members are supposedly secret. Saturday, June 14, Arcata Plaza. oysterfestival.net.

The 36th Annual Humboldt Folklife Festival. Shift gears for Dell'Arte's sprawling three-week Mad River Festival and its full week of folky local music, with a kickoff at Mad River Brewery, Americana music for Sunday's Annie and Mary Day, a songwriters' night, a jazz night and a pair of country nights — first "old fashioned" and then "outlaw." There's a barn dance in Arcata on Friday, July 18, leading to Saturday's wrap-up, the All Day Folklife Free Festival with dozens of musicians, bands, dancing, workshops and more, all around Dell'Arte. Saturday, July 12 to Saturday, July 19, Blue Lake and Arcata. www.humboldtfolklife.org.

Northern Nights Music Festival 2.0. Back for year two, the organic dance music festival on the Eel has an all-star lineup including the amazing Beats Antique, Giraffage, The Floozies, Viceroy, EPROM, Fort Know Five and tons of local DJs and producers. Friday, July 18 to Sunday, July 20, Cooks Valley Campground, Piercy. www.northernnights.org.

The Second Annual Blue Lake Music Festival. This one's about the music, morning to night, and puts an emphasis on tributes with The Miracle Show (Grateful Dead), Silver Hammer (Beatles), Jimi Jeff and the Gypsy Band (Hendrix), as well as Motherlode (who know a James Brown tune if required) and half a dozen other acts. Saturday, July 26, Perigot Park in Blue Lake. www.bluelakemusicfest.com.

The 30th Annual Reggae on the River. This is a really, really big one, with the Mateel once again at French's Camp and taking it back to the roots in more ways than one. Among the classics: Jimmy Cliff, Alpha Blondy, Third World, Israel Vibration, Michael Rose, Sly & Robbie with The Taxi Gang and Mutabaruka, neo-classics like Gentleman, Iration and Gyptian, and homegrown faves including Ishi Dube, Winstrong, Thicker Than Thieves and Jade Steel. An irie time is guaranteed. Thursday, July 31 to Sunday, Aug. 3, French's Camp, just south of Richardson's Grove State Park. www.mateel.org.

The 14th Annual Buddy Brown Blues Festival. This year, the Mad River Fest ends with a weekend full of blues with bands at the Logger Bar, Mad River Brewery and Blue Lake Casino, all centered around the multi-band Buddy Brown fest at Perigot Park. Friday, Aug. 1 to Sunday, Aug. 3, all over Blue Lake. www.humboldtfolklife.org. (Yes, same time as Reggae on the River.)

Humboldt Bay Full of Blues? When the Redwood Coast Music Festival board dropped Blues by the Bay last year, dedicated fans started plans for another blues fest Labor Day weekend and reserved Halvorsen Park. At this point they need to gather likeminded blues fans and land some major sponsors to make it happen. Tentatively Saturday, Aug. 30 and Sunday, Aug. 31. Details on Facebook or at glen-nmaxon.com

The 41st Annual North Country Fair. The Same Old People are hard at work on organizing a wide array of music, arts and crafts for the weekend around autumnal equinox in Arcata. Figure on Samba da Alegria's parade Saturday, the All Species Parade on Sunday — both at 1 p.m. — with local music and dance on three stages both days. Sept. 20 and 21 on the Arcata Plaza. www.sameoldpeople.org.

Music festivals seem to be popping up everywhere you look. With musicians having a tough time in the recording business and touring costs up, playing the big multi-band shows are one the few ways bands still make money. Here are a few of the best fests within a days' drive from Humboldt.

The Second BottleRock Napa Valley. This music-fest-meets-wine-and-food-expo somehow made through the first year. The insanely eclectic lineup brings together 60 acts on four stages with headliners Outkast, The Cure, Weezer, Heart, Deerhunter, De la Soul, Cracker, Blues Traveler, Matisyahu and Mayer Hawthorne. Friday,

May 30 through Sunday, June 1, Napa Expo, downtown Napa. www.bottlerock-napa.com.

The 21st Annual Sierra Nevada World Music Festival. It moved from the Sierras years ago, and it's more reggae than "world" music, but it always has a stellar lineup. Jamaican stars like Shaggy, Barrington Levy, Horace Andy, Mykal Rose and Tarrus Riley top the bill with Rebelution out of SoCal, while Fela's son Seun Kuti is about as worldly as you get. Friday, June 20 to Sunday, June 22, Mendocino County Fairgrounds, Boonville. www.snmwf.com.

The 19th Annual Kate Wolf Music Festival. It started as a memorial to folk icon Kate Wolf, but expanded the take on folk. Joan Baez is a headliner, along with Indigo Girls, and Tom Paxton plays all weekend. But the lineup also includes Darleen Love, Jackie Greene, Garth Hudson from The Band, Playing For Change Band with Los Lobos and BeauSoleil spinning things in other directions. Friday, June 27 to Sunday, June 29, at Black Oak Ranch, north of Laytonville. www.katewolfmusicfestival.com.

The 24th Annual High Sierra Music Festival. Formerly focused on jambands, the Independence Day weekend fest now includes the best of bluegrass, jazz and EDM. Top of the bill includes Wide-spread Panic, STS9, Beats Antique, The Del McCoury Band, Greensky Bluegrass, Bill Frisell, Stanley Jordan Trio, Bombino and The Mother Hips. Thursday, July 3 to Sunday, July 6, Plumas Sierra County Fairgrounds, Quincy. www.highsierramusic.com.

The Seventh Annual Outside Lands. This outside mega-party in SF's Golden Gate Park demonstrates the power of giant stars with Kanye West, Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers and The Killers for starters, but let's stop right there. Even though the show's not until August, tickets sold out in April. Wow. Good luck with those scalpers. Friday Aug. 8 to Sunday, Aug. 10, Golden Gate Park, San Francisco. www.sfoutsidelands.com. ●

The Road Not (Yet) Taken

A tour of the Eel River Estuary Preserve

By Ken Burton

outdoors@northcoastjournal.com

In case you hadn't noticed, there's a veritable tsunami of public-access improvements sweeping Humboldt County: the Arcata Ridge, Humboldt Bay and Hikshari trails; the McKay Tract; the Eel River Estuary Preserve — wait, the what?

The delta of the Eel River, extending from Table Bluff to Loleta, Fernbridge and Centerville, is a subtly beautiful agricultural landscape incised by a maze of streams and tide channels. Except for the waterways themselves, nearly all of it is privately owned and has been off limits to the public for a long time. A new kid on the block, the Wildlands Conservancy, a nonprofit organization headquartered in Southern California, is quietly but doggedly working to facilitate public use of a large chunk of the Ferndale Bottoms while maintaining most of the site's traditional uses and restoring damaged habitats.

In 2008 and 2009, the Wildlands Conservancy purchased the 1,100-acre Connick Ranch, situated north and east of Centerville Beach, and established the Eel River Estuary Preserve (EREP). Mostly diked pastureland, the preserve, now encompassing

1,200 acres, also contains 300 acres of salt marsh, the lower reaches of Russ Creek and Cutoff Slough and some freshwater wetlands. It also includes 4 miles of beach and dunes on the south spit of the Eel that were owned by Pacific Lumber and used to collect timber that had drifted down the river and out the mouth. The conservancy is leasing the pasture to a local organic dairy to maintain it as grassland (and generate revenue) and managing a historic waterfowl hunting club that has used the site for years.

The Wildlands Conservancy has big plans for the preserve. After more than a century of tidal wetland reclamation and grazing, the site is sorely in need of rehabilitation. Stream channels are clogged with sediment, salt marshes are overrun with invasive cordgrass and the dunes are covered with European beach grass. The nonprofit is seeking funding to restore some historic tidal action, eradicate invasive species and create spawning grounds for coho and chinook salmon.

The organization's dual mission is conservation and education and its intended uses of the preserve include picnicking, hiking, wildlife viewing, nature study, academic research, equestrian use, photography, outdoor education, bicycling and boating. There are already 3 miles of multi-use trail and another couple of miles of primitive trail. A 2-mile kayak route is planned.

Although public access is by reservation only (for now), the Eel River Estuary Preserve got onto the radar of birders statewide this year thanks to a gyrfalcon — an Arctic bird seldom seen in California — that was there from December to February feasting on ducks and shorebirds (sometimes stolen from peregrine falcons). Birders flocked to the preserve from hundreds of miles around to appreciate the “gyr” as well as other locally uncommon raptors, including a golden eagle, prairie falcon, crested caracara and several rough-legged hawks. In fact, the preserve is proving to be one of the best winter raptor locations in the region.

After checking in at the new office building at the preserve entrance, you head out, on foot, to the north on a gravel road. Cattle graze peacefully on both sides and several historic barns dot the distant landscape. The first thing that strikes you is how vast it feels. Few other places in our region are so flat and open, and you can be excused for wondering if you took a wrong turn somewhere and wound up on the Texas coast. The road bends to the northwest and runs between pastures and sloughs; from fall to spring, the latter harbor waterfowl and shorebirds.

A little over a mile out, you reach a levee that makes a 2-mile circuit of a tidal marsh, excellent for birding and with good views of the surrounding area. A left turn here gives you a choice: head out to an old barn and over the dunes to the ocean or, at low tide, make your way north up the lee side of the dunes on a network of obscure old ranch roads to a low bluff overlooking the Eel River. The latter passes an impressive and incongruous red-wood stump probably deposited by the 1964 flood. From there you can continue to the river's mouth, a wild and seldom-visited place where the river and ocean meet in a tumult of waves and foam — take care not to disturb the resting seals. The roundtrip hike from the office to the river mouth, bypassing the marsh loop, is about 9 miles. Another option would be to arrange a car shuttle and walk south down the beach to Centerville Beach. The open terrain and lack of formal trails allow for spontaneous meandering to your heart's content.

To visit the Eel River Estuary Preserve, phone the preserve's manager, Dave Erickson, at 672-4725 to make a reservation. He'll provide directions and check-in instructions. Trail maps are available at the office. ●

Hooters and Computers

Cold shoulders and over-zealous bolders

By Jessica McGuinty

Hey McGuinty!

My husband recently moved out of the area for work, leaving me and our 1-year-old here for a few months until we find housing. I work full time and when I'm home I'm a full time mom, waking up at night to a crying baby, cooking, changing diapers and so on. I don't even remember the last time I got to use the restroom by myself besides at work!

Last night my husband said he was going to dinner with his friend. I was happy for him because I thought "He probably misses us like crazy, this will be good for him." He called me on his lunch break today, and when I asked him where they went, he replied, "My friend chose Hooters." I immediately hung up. I was appalled! I'm here slaving away like a single parent while he is out at Hooters? Come on — you don't go there for the wings. He's not a flirt, but since I'm so overwhelmed by our situation, I just can't see past this. Am I overreacting?

We're supposed to visit him this weekend, but part of me doesn't want to. Help!

— Mad Mom

MAD MOM!

This is a tricky one, eh? Ultimately, I do think you're overreacting if you don't visit your husband this weekend, but I'm not saying you're totally wrong for being upset.

In my opinion (and that's all this column really is, right? My opinion?), this incident is pretty low on the ladder of crappy behavior your husband could exhibit. Granted, we don't know if he was flirting with any of the Hooter's girls but you say that's not his typical behavior. You're right, it's not like anybody goes there for the fine (or even mediocre) dining, so I totally get why you're feeling pissed off and dejected. Being stuck with a baby and working full time likely doesn't leave you much time to go to, say, the Thunder From Down Under. We have to believe it was his friend's idea. On the other hand, he didn't object. I'm guessing that if he was out being a total creep, he wouldn't have told you he was there. Honesty is crucial, even when you know your partner may not want to hear what you have to say. So I like that he told you and he should be acknowledged for doing so. I absolutely think you should still go visit him. You're both going through a lot of stress and upheaval and your relationship isn't going to be strengthened by freezing him out and staying home. You need to be together as much as you can right now, even if you're pissed off when you get there.

Hey McGuinty!

Someone at work insists on using excessive punctuation and capitalizes the Wrong Letters!! I know it's not a big Deal!!!! But it's unprofessional!! I'm afraid he makes our workplace look BAD!!! I have called it to his attention, and he shrugs it off!!! He doesn't think it's a big deal but it makes him, and by extension us, look like backward illiterates. WHO'S JOB IS IT to get this bozo to stop embarrassing us? What's a subtle trick to show this person that it affects us all? HELP ME CONVINCE HIM, MCGUINTY!

— Frustrated

FRUSTRATED!

Oh God, my eyes. MY EYES! This letter burns them. I can't imagine what it must be like to work with someone who sends out correspondence on behalf of your company that looks like, well, that.

I wish you'd mentioned whether this person is a supervisor, subordinate or lateral co-worker. That matters here. You ask whose job it is to get him or her to top embarrassing your company — it's the boss's job.

If you're the boss, that means it's up to you to correct him or her. If this person is the boss, that's much trickier. If neither of you has authority over the other, I think it's perfectly reasonable to approach your boss with your concerns. Tell your supervisor that you don't want to be the grammar police, but that this is a far greater issue than you're/your, and it does indeed make your company look less professional. Now that your letter is in "Hey McGuinty," it wouldn't hurt to leave 9 or 15 copies laying around your office in hopes the offender will read it and realize this is a serious issue, not just an overly critical co-worker being a jerk. ●

Jessica McGuinty, founder of Jessicurl and master of the joyful laugh, doesn't really think she has all the answers — but she'll give it a try. Write her at hey-mcguinty@northcoastjournal.com.

THE SETLIST

Passages

A reminder to be kinder

By Jennifer Savage

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

Humboldt State's graduation weekend manifests itself in many ways. Students exhale as the final assignment is turned in and the world crowns them official adults. Parents rejoice in their children's accomplishments and start worrying about what's next. Arcata residents grumble at the weekend's increased chaos and look forward to summer's lessened population. Inspiring words pop up on Facebook. One of the better convocation speeches took place at Syracuse University last year, when the brilliant author George Saunders told the graduating class, "What I regret most in my life are failures of kindness." In addition to all the usual encouragement to experience one's days to the fullest, Saunders urges people to get kinder faster. While the words may be especially appropriate for those launching into a new chapter, the recommendation to "do those things that incline you toward the big questions, and avoid the things that would reduce you and make you trivial" is worth heeding always.

Music — the best music — induces passion, joy, catharsis and community, brings us into the moment, takes us outside of ourselves. Next time you're at a show — and I hope that occasion is imminent — put your phone away, hug the friend you're with and let a sense of good accompany the sweet/raucous sound washing over you.

Friday: With a little help from friends

On that note, seems appropriate to start off with "Waiting For A Miracle: A Benefit For Steve Watts," which takes place at Humboldt Brews starting at 6 p.m. Watts, a local musician and cofounder of the music production company Passion Presents, was badly injured in an MMA fight last month. His friends want to help his recovery, naturally, and are hosting a silent auction to raise money for medical bills. Fun Beatles tribute band Silver Hammer performs. The event is 21-and-over with at $10 cover.

Friday: So much for the afterglow

The band came out with a new album last year, but for most fans, the appeal is nostalgia, which is fine, because frontman Art Alexakis has been orchestrating retro "Summerland" tours and because the new music sounds a lot like the old music, despite Alexakis being the only original member. No matter — all we really want is to live beside the ocean, leave the world behind, swim out past the breakers and otherwise sing along to Everclear's greatest hits. This opportunity to revisit your past takes place at Cher-Ae Heights Casino, doors at 7 p.m., show at 8 p.m. Tickets are $39 general, $49 premium.

Friday: A higher state of mind

"Hi there, I appreciate very much you guys writing that little deal for the epic Fishbone show that happened at my venue in Hayfork called Northern Delights. I just wanted to mention a few more shows coming up soon that if you'd be so kind..." Of course, Francesco — being kind is our whole theme. Folks brave enough to drive out to Hayfork can catch President Brown for $25, one drink included. Play it safe by buying tickets in advance via northerndelightsayfork.com.

Friday: All over it

Local boy done good Berel Alexander relocated to Oakland a while back to better serve his mission of bringing West Coast Soul to the masses. For the past four years, the neo-R&B five-piece has performed at the Sundance Film Festival and opened for G. Love & Special Sauce — things are going well. In January, Alexander released a new EP, All Over It, and now he returns to play a hometown show at the Arcata Theatre Lounge. It'll be a good-looking, feel-good kinda gig. Increasingly popular local jam band Liquid Kactus opens. Diggin' Dirt also plays. Doors open at 8 p.m., cost is $10 at the door, $8 advance and this show is 21-and-over.

Side note: I dropped in to the BigFish Vapor Lab to check out High Crimes last week, was chatting with a couple 20-something HSU students and Liquid Kactus's name came up. "What do they sound like?" they asked. "They're a jam band," I answered. The friends looked at each other, then me. "What's a jam band?" Oh, how times have changed in Arcata! When I relayed this to a musician friend later, she waxed rhapsodic about the wonderfulness of playing together in such a way that each musician takes turns leading, following, building upon and responding to each other's improvisation. This was much kinder than my characterization of jamming as "musical masturbation" — my impatience with long noodley instrumental riffs is but one of many possible responses. Those of you who relish such things (hi, Phish fans!) will enjoy Liquid Kactus, too.

Saturday: Celebrations

First, please note the return of the Humboldt Arts Festival! The fest brings even more art and cool to the Creamery District all weekend long. Check out the Calendar on page 45 for full details.

Oh, yes. Let's get our party on with Soul Night XXXI: The Vibe Doctor is Out. The purveyors of Humboldt's most successful dance event characterize graduation weekend as "the time where our town is overrun with parents driving the wrong way and drunken cousins from Chico slappin' five." More importantly, they continue, "It's also when our resident Vibe Doctor, Matthew Freedom, is packing up and moving to Pennsylvania." Please attire yourself in all black to both mourn and celebrate this departure. As part of the ceremony, DJ Red joins the crew. Tickets are $5, doors open at 9 p.m. This party is 21-and-over. Meanwhile, over at the ATL, a show for those graduates not saddled with parental entertaining. Go on, get filthy with LOUDPVCK and Psy Fi. Doors open at

Monday: In which mankind goes extinct and I use the word 'crust' repeatedly Placebo requests you dedicate your Monday night to a serious punk show featuring UK crust punk band Extinction of Mankind. Formed in 1992, the band has recorded and toured with such punk/crust heavyweights as Misery, Wolfpack, Warcollapse, Doom and Skitsystem with a sound described as "pure crust to the core with heavy metallic riffs, raging percussion and socio-political lyrics furiously shouted in defiance." Also playing, Deathwish, Miasmic and Dandruff. All ages, natch, and at the Ink Annex. Show starts at 7 p.m. and costs $12 general, $10 members. No booze or drugs.

Tuesday: Bump'n'grind'n'green

Flagstaff's Greco sounds like something from 1980s Britain, delivering a sound somewhere between old new wave and retro Euro pop. Joining it at the Jambalaya are A-town's megapoppers The Wild Lungs, plus Arcata grinders Gout. Doors at 9 p.m., music at 10 p.m., cover is $5 and this good time is limited to those aged 21-or-over. Simultaneously, Oahu reggae stars The Green bring dub-heavy roots reggae to the Mateel Community Center. Doors at 7:30 p.m., show at 8 p.m., tickets are $25 and this one is all ages.

Future fun party rock alert

Austin's Adrian & The Sickness team up with local rockers Lord Ellis at the Jambalaya on Thursday, May 22 at 8 p.m. Frontwoman Adrian Cooner, best known as lead guitarist for the AC/DC tribute band Hell's Belles, describes the power trio's new album, Be Your Own Saviour, as "kind of like Darkside of the Moon with a less specific story line and more loud, horny parts." Pun intended?

Etc.

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Eight Days a Week calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com. ●

Nonstop Party

How good are you at multi-tasking? Because a lot is happening at once at the Humboldt Arts Festival over in Arcata's Creamery District (Eighth and L streets) on Saturday, May 17 and Sunday, May 18. The newly resurrected art, music and dance spectacle is packed to the rafters with stages and performers. Try to keep up.

On Saturday, starting at 11 a.m., the acoustic stage hosts 11 acts, from Jeff Krider to Gunsafe to Caitlin Jemma and the Long Gone Stringband. The Tomas Field stage will have Lizzy & the Moonbeams, Jah Sun and Absynth Quintet. At noon, West African Percussion starts things off with a bang on the performance stage, followed by 10 more acts like Humboldt Capoeira, the fearless Circus of the Elements and innovative dancers from the Upper Studio. The playhouse stage, meanwhile, starts with Kindred Spirits at noon, then five more bands, including Swownd and Meskalito. Take a break and fuel up with some vittles from the local vendors. At 9 p.m. it's the after party at the Arcata Playhouse with Samba Quente, Cyclops & the Owl (probably not literal, don't set yourself up for disappointment) and more ($5).

Sleep in on Sunday, but not too late. The fun starts again at 11 a.m. on the acoustic stage with half a dozen bands, including Kitty Glitter (again, probably not literal), La Musique Diabolique and Canary and the Vamp (that could actually happen). At the same time on the Tomas Field stage, there's Sierra Rose, UFO8, Farmhouse Odyssey and HSU Calypso. Or do you need to be over at the playhouse for the Alegria Parade, Orquesta del Ritmo, Small Axe and Space Biscuit? Don't answer yet, because there's more dance at 12:45 p.m. on the performance stage with Hoaloha Pumehanda, Tango Del Sol, Redwood Rings Hoop Dance and others. Keep in mind you'll also want to peruse the painting, photography, illustration and sculpture in every nook and cranny of the place.

Not Fade Away

Gigolo can't keep it up, Neighbors delivers

By John J. Bennett

filmland@northcoastjournal.com

Reviews

FADING GIGOLO. As an actor, John Turturro is possessed with a kind of vibratory, coiled-spring nervousness that makes his most memorable performances indelible and uniquely his. The Coen brothers have a particular talent for drawing out his unease, and some of the characters he has played for them are, as a result, immortal. I'm thinking especially of his Barton Fink (1991) and the sickly satisfying, all-scene stealing Jesus Quintana in The Big Lebowski (1998). But as a writer/director, Turturro draws from a different well altogether, creating and assembling scenes with a sedate, aloof jazziness that, at least for me, can be a little difficult to get used to.

Fioravante (Turturro), a part-time florist and good-natured, amateur lothario, makes a living, but barely. Ditto his good friend Murray (Woody Allen), who we learn in the opening scene must reluctantly close his family's rare book shop. In the course of the same scene, Murray relates a conversation he had with his sultry, strangely intimate dermatologist (Sharon Stone). She's told Murray that she and a girlfriend are ready to try out a threesome. And that they would, of course, be willing to pay. He, perhaps not surprisingly, geeks out on this for a time before arriving at the conclusion that Fioravante would, for some reason, be a perfect candidate. The would-be gigolo resists, albeit quietly and only for a minute, and then they're in business. Through a network of which we as audience have little knowledge, Murray flourishes in his pimp role, securing wealthy, exclusively attractive clients for Fior. The boys make a tidy profit, the ladies enjoy Fior's company; it's a win-win.

Things get complicated when Murray draws a lonely rabbi's widow, Avigal (Vanessa Paradis), into their affairs. In some misplaced combination of vicarious lust and sympathy, he pitches Fior to her as a kind of therapist. It isn't entirely inaccurate, but his conscious omission of the sex for money part of the arrangement is a sticking point. Regardless, Fior and Avigal develop a mutual affinity, to the detriment of his job performance with other clients. It also raises the ire of Dovi (Liev Schreiber), a perhaps overly enthusiastic neighborhood patrolman — he's not a cop, incidentally, and though he drives a cop-type car and wears a stab-vest, his affiliation is unclear — and in turn the Hasidic elders of said neighborhood.

Fading Gigolo boasts a strong cast (Sofia Vergara and Bob Balaban make appearances), a pretty aesthetic and a strong, down-tempo jazz sense of time and place. Turturro's Fioravante, strong and quiet, deferential when appropriate, makes sense in this context: he's flawed enough to seem real, and he's attractive and aloof enough to seem "other." But beyond those attributes, the movie doesn't really work. The plot feels like it's building toward something until things get complicated with the Hasidim, but after that "climax," whatever little energy it accumulated evaporates. In the end, we're left with a character study that feels more like an actor's exercise than a thoroughly written story. R. 98m.

NEIGHBORS. As I age, I gradually realize that I will probably never outgrow my love of sophomoric humor. I laugh at Wilde and Wilder, but I may always appreciate pratfalls and dick jokes. And I like Neighbors. It makes me laugh. A lot.

Mac and Kelly Radner (Seth Rogen and Rose Byrne) are a youngish couple with their hipness and partying shrinking in the rear-view. They buy a house in a nice suburban neighborhood that seems perfect for raising their new baby girl. But then an Animal House-style fraternity moves in next door. At first it's fun; the fraternity brothers seem cool, they all get drunk together. But when Delta Psi refuses to turn the music down, a minor conflict escalates rapidly. The Radners find themselves at war with the fraternity and their charismatic, hedonistic leader Teddy (Zac Efron).

The plot isn't really the thing here, as it serves mainly as a vehicle for a series of set-piece party sequences and sight gags. But to its credit, the script by Andrew J. Cohen and Brendan O'Brien makes some canny observations about the passage

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call PRIME PACIFIC at (707) 468-5300 Ext. 11 [telephone message recording] or you may call PRIME PACIFIC at (707) 468-5300 Ext. 10 and talk to a person directly. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information (Ext. 11). THE BEST WAY TO VERIFY POSTPONEMENT INFORMATION IS TO ATTEND THE SCHEDULED SALE.

The mortgagee or beneficiary is not required to give notice under CA Civil Code Section 2923.5.
